

IN THE WHITE HOUSE.

The Remains of the Late President McKinley Arrived in the National Capital.

His Last Journey to the Seat of Government Was Made Through a Living Lane of Bared Heads.

Whole Country Seems to Have Been Drawn to the Side of the Tracks Over Which the Funeral Train Passed.

A Million Flags at Half-Mast Dotted the Hillsides and Valleys Along the Route From Buffalo to Washington.

Washington, Sept. 17.—Throughout a living lane of bared-headed people stretching from Buffalo up over the Alleghenies down to the Valley of the Ohio, the scene of the grand funeral of President McKinley, the stars and stripes, furled and knotted, were flying, flags, domes, and windows of windows. Over all gleamed cold, scores of electric lights, defining sharply each group of mourners.

There Was No Music.

Ranked on both sides of the avenue, were tens of thousands of people. They had come to pay their tribute to the man who had been the nation's chief.

The military were already in line. As the train entered into Pennsylvania Avenue a deeply impressive sight was presented, the stars and stripes, furled and knotted, flying, flags, domes, and windows of windows. Over all gleamed cold, scores of electric lights, defining sharply each group of mourners.

ALL DOUBTS ARE BEING DISSIPATED.

BRITISH COMMENT.

The Foreign Policy of President Roosevelt Discussed by the London Newspapers.

THE MORNING POST SAYS HE IS A PERSONIFICATION OF THE YOUNGER GENERATION OF AMERICANS.

DAILY GRAPHIC SAYS ROOSEVELT OCCUPIES A MORE POWERFUL POSITION THAN ANY SOVEREIGN WITH TWO EXCEPTIONS.

London, Sept. 17.—Further familiarity with the idea of Mr. Roosevelt as president is having its natural result in dissipating doubts entertained as to the effect of his succession upon the foreign policy of the United States. At any rate, it is becoming generally agreed that the new generation of Americans who have obtained a president of great distinction of his policy Sunday is the subject of general comment.

The Daily Graphic, which points out that the younger members of the United States occupies a more powerful position than any sovereign in Christendom, with the possible exception of the German emperor and the czar of Russia, sums up his policy as "that of some imperialist devoted to the advancement and glory of his country while ignoring others."

The Morning Post, in an editorial, says: "He is the personification of the younger generation of Americans who are looking forward rather than dreaming of the past. He is a man who seems to be a leader of his countrymen in their new era, which will be a president of great initiative, devoted to the national rather than to the party line."

This journal says that "no nation ever came to maturity without attempting to assert itself as one, if not the first, of the governing powers of the world."

In conclusion, the Morning Post recommends Great Britain to try to impress the American ideals, instead of lecturing Americans on their diplomatic methods.

The Daily Mail says: "The United States has at present no chief at their head. We may expect with confidence that Mr. Roosevelt will be a moderating and not an exacerbating influence."

TO KILL ROOSEVELT,

Frank Edgington Belonged to a Society That Would Give $50,000 to an Assassin.

Cleveland, Sept. 17.—"I belong to it so society that will give $50,000 to any man who will kill President Roosevelt," said Frank Edgington to Chas. Flinnar, in Reynolds' saloon, St. Clair street, Saturday night.

A crowd of gamblers was discussing the assassination of the late President McKinley, and some decidedly unamiable remarks had been made before the tall man made the alleged offer. The men were notified and Edgington was arrested. Frank Edgington, a blacksmith, aged 22, was arrested, and charged with the murder of his employer. Edgington is alleged to have said: "I belong to a society that will give $50,000 to any man who will kill President Roosevelt"; Edgington at hearing did not deny that he had made the statement. He was remanded.

THE BRITISH COURT.

King Edward Directs That It Go Into Mourning For a Week For the Late President McKinley.

Mrs. McKinley Stood the Tryng Oration Following the President's Death Remarkably Well.

Mrs. McKinley has stood the strain of the trying period following the death of her husband with remarkable fortitude. Her physician, Dr. Rice, was unanimous in his belief that she will go through the ordeal with strength.

The half hour she bore the coffin of her beloved husband followed the ceremony, followed by a period of depression. The King, however, directed that she stand by him.

Now that she has gone through the trials and fatigues of Sunday, she is in a condition to feel there is little serious danger of mental collapse.

The future, when the nerve tension of the present period is over, will be the time when she will be alone in the quiet of Canton, with the flood of recollection and the burden of grief.

"Every precaution must be taken by all in the public interest to keep her surely certain."

An adolescent passenger agent, had personal charge of the train. The train left Buffalo at 7 A. M. Monday morning. No time was given to the New York rail road system 30 minutes before the arrival of the train. The length of time after the train had passed, however, was almost sufficient for the son had sent out explicit instructions covering every detail. The order concluded:

"Every precaution must be taken by all in the public interest to keep her surely certain."

On the return trip, another agent, had personal charge of the train. The train left Buffalo at 7 A. M. Monday morning. No time was given to the New York rail road system 30 minutes before the arrival of the train.

Monday night in 12 hours it is estimated that the train is estimated to have run 1,000 miles.

Frank Edgington, a blacksmith, aged 22, was arrested, and charged with the murder of his employer. Edgington is alleged to have said: "I belong to a society that will give $50,000 to any man who will kill President Roosevelt"; Edgington at hearing did not deny that he had made the statement. He was remanded.

F. W. HARROP,

There is more Captain in this section of the country than all other classes put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced Captain as incurable, and the public were led to believe that he could not be cured, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced incurable. Science has proven Captain can be cured by a simple operation, and requires no additional treatment. Hail's Cancer Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on earth. It is a simple operation, and requires only drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and nervous surface of the system. They sell for circuses and testimonial advertisements.
